

Oh, so there is this rich Russian guy who loves to go to bars, casinos, more often especially in Lithuania . So he goes there one day and meets this funny, cool guy at a bar, who happens to be a criminal, they have couple drinks that night , get drunk and eventually they become good friends. The criminal actually is a thief, he robs people. This is his hobby. However, with the russian he is actually thinking of making an exception and spare him because they actually became good friends.

One day the russian decides to go to Vilnius and lets his friend know they can meet up at the airport before, because the thief also works as a flight attendant and will be on the same airplane as him. So they meet up before, hug each other but the criminal spots the little luggage. Afterwards he couldnt help himself not to do the same thing.

So he switches the luggage with another similar one that has some different stuff in it, while on that one are all of the Russian preciuos stuff, money, belongins... So the Russian lands not realizing yet that he has nothing. After, the russian realized he lost his own luggage he asks his thief friend for help. The thief says to his friend that he'll pay the company to find his luggage but doesn't and keeps all the money.

And so it goes on and on: he's lying about trying to find it and helping him but actually betrays him and finally disappears with the russians money.